Wanted to Change One Word.

Private John All:n of Mississippi had a case in the supreme court the other day. It had been dragging along for a good while in the lower tribunals, and when it was reached in the higher body the opposing counsel presented a brief history of the cause so far as it had gone. The justices had listened attentively to the lawyer, and when he bad finished Mr. All:n was asked if the opposing counsel had stated what was strictly true.

"If your honors please," said the astute Mississippian, "I can best answer the question with a little story. Some time ago a sheriff in one of the countles in my state died. There was another gentleman residing in the county who though he could fill the official shoes to a nicety, so be proceeded to draw up a recommendation in his own behalf for appointment to the vacancy and then secured the neighbors' signatures to it. He recited in the document his numerous qualifications for the position and stated, among other things, that 'Mr. Jones was surietly honest.' He carried the paper to eld Judge Smith and asked him to sign it.

"The judge put on his specs and carefully him to sign it.

"The judge put on his specs and carefully read the paper over. Then he coughed and
